Posse Rescues Insane Slayer Of Girl; Minor Blames Booze

Bellaire, Ohio, Girl, 7, Choked to Death by Man Saved From Drowning at Mob's Hands

BELLAIRE, Ohio, July 19.—After being rescued from a mob of men who threatened to drown him in the river for the murder of Anna Kreso, 7, a man who said he had lost his memory after a moonshine drink, was brought to Bellaire today and placed under heavy guard.

The man is a miner, police said. The mob assembled last night in response to the little Kreso girl's screams. She was attacked on her way home from the store at Big Run, ten miles south of here, and was dead when physicians reached the scene, her mouth stuffed full of grass and a rope of vine and grass bound tightly about her neck.

Her alleged assailant fled as the mob of miners approached. A few minutes later he was overtaken on the banks of the river and severely beaten. The miners were rushing him toward the river apparently intending to throw him in when police intervened.

In a statement to police today the captured miner said that he did not remember anything that happened at Big Run as he had been drinking moonshine.

POLICE MAKE HAUL

Brings to Light Local Whisky Ring, Says Covington

Capture of 22 gallons of corn whisky and arrest of three white men alleged to be connected with its manufacture, sale, and transportation resulted about 10:30 Friday night following a raid on a residence at the far end of Tenth street by Police Chief W. W. Covington and Detective Rowe.

Make Second Haul

A five-gallon jar of whisky was first found but after the prisoners were brought to the station a second hunt was made following conversation with them and another five-gallon jar and a 12-gallon barrel found full of whisky, officers said.

Chief Covington questioned several others in connection with the haul this morning.

A small whisky ring of operators and dispensers is being brought to light by the arrests and investigations, Chief Covington said.

It is impossible for the prosecution to prove where Robert Franks met death, the defense claims.

Leopold and Loeb, although making full confessions of their crime, at no time have told where they victimized Clarence Darrow, chief defense counsel, told the United Press.

As a matter of fact, Darrow said, the defendants do not know just when and where the Franks boy died.

"There were no witnesses to the murder," the state has only the signed confessions of the slayers as testimony of how and where they killed their victim. According to their confessions, this is what happened:

They met Robert Franks and took him for an automobile ride through the exclusive residential section of Chicago's southside.

Within a few minutes after Robert got into the car, one of the boys struck him over the head with a cloth-bound club.

When they reached a quiet point along the country road near Hecsville, Indiana, they prepared to undress Robert and put the finishing touches on their crime.

Here it was according to their confessions, that they found for the first time that Robert was dead.

May Belong to Indiana Court

Whether he died after a few minutes after he was struck on the head or whether he died after they crossed the state line into Indiana, no person is able to tell, Darrow holds.

Finding that death had come soon after they expected to their victim, Leopold and Loeb drove back into Illinois and concealed the body under a railroad culvert near the Chicago city limits.

Since their confessions do not state where Franks died, they are not conclusive evidence that Franks was killed in Illinois or Indiana, according to Darrow. If the boy was assaulted in Illinois and died in Indiana, the case belongs to an Indiana court. But if the case was transferred from Chicago to Gary or some other Indiana city it would be just as impossible to prove that Franks died in that state, the defense insists.

This comprises a barrier which the defense claims will forever stand between the slayers and the gallows.

At the preliminary hearing next Monday, when all motions in the case will be heard by Chief Justice John R. Claverly, Darrow will make the customary motions to quash the indictment and to postpone the trial.

But if the trial is ordered for August 4, as scheduled, the defense will be ready, Darrow said.

Dokeys: Here to Attend Big Ceremonial

Port Arthur faxes will be seen conspicuously and in large numbers at Orange Saturday afternoon and night when Dokeys from Knights of Pythias lodge meet there for one of the largest ceremonials ever held in this part of the state.

All Port Arthur D. O. K. K. members are from El Vie temple and some twenty of these are members of the drill patrol and will be at the Orange ceremonial. In addition other members and nightseers are expected to attend, making probably 200 to make the trip, officials say.

SUSPECT ARRESTED

Arrested Friday night of man giving his name as Jess Freeman was made on Sixteenth street by Officers Beckham and Smith of the police department following descriptions sent by Bay City officials who stated the man was wanted on a felony charge.

A telegram from Bay City this morning received at police station said an officer would be here for the prisoner some time Saturday.

Quibble Over State In Which Franks Died May Save Slayers

To Convict Loeb and Leopold State Must Prove Franks Was Killed in Cook County, Says Darrow

BY UNITED PRESS

Copyright, 1934, by United Press

CHICAGO, July 19.—Where was Robert Franks killed? Illinois or Indiana?

Nobody knows, not even Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, youthful millionaires, who confessed to the killing, the defense holds.

And the foregoing is the reason why the defense believes the boys will never hang for the crime, it was exclusively revealed to the United Press today.

To convict the youthful university graduates and to send them to the gallows, the state must prove that they killed the Franks boy within the limits of Cook county, the defense insists. This, the defense claims, can never be proved.

Claims Proof Impossible

If the state fails to prove that Franks was killed in Cook county and the case is no longer under the jurisdiction of Chicago courts and if the case goes to another Illinois county or to an Indiana court again, it will be impossible for the prosecution to prove where Robert Franks met death, the defense claims.

Leopold and Loeb, although making full confessions of their crime, at no time have told where they victimized Clarence Darrow, chief defense counsel, told the United Press.

As a matter of fact, Darrow said, the defendants do not know just when and where the Franks boy died.

SHAVEN NAMED DEMO CHAIRMAN

West Virginia Man to Manage Davis Campaign

NEW YORK, July 19.—Formal announcement of the appointment of Clem Shaver of West Virginia as chairman of the democratic national committee and manager of the presidential campaign of John W. Davis was made at Davis' headquarters here Friday.

At the same time it was announced that Davis would receive official notification of his nomination and deliver his acceptance speech at Clarksburg, W. Va., August 11.

The speech, like that of President Coolidge, will be delivered at 8 p. m. in order to take advantage of radio broadcasting facilities, which will give him a nationwide audience at that hour.

74 Poll Tax Transfers Are Made in Two Days

Poll tax transfers taken up by Port Arthur citizens Thursday and Friday at the station maintained by Miss Ada Lockhart, county tax collector at the city hall, amounted to 74, according to Miss Pauline Sealie, in charge of the office.

The great majority of the transfers was made Friday as on Thursday, but the transfers were recorded. The office was maintained so as to make it unnecessary for Port Arthur voters moving since the payment of poll taxes into another precinct to go to the county seat to record the change.

JUGO-SLAV CABINET QUILTS PORTFOLIOS

BEGRAD, July 19.—The Jugoslav cabinet of Premier Pavlovic has resigned, according to a Central News Bureau dispatch for the purpose of allowing the government an opportunity to consult informally with leaders of the opposition regarding home affairs.

Premier Pavlovic declared himself categorically opposed to formation of a parliamentary coalition cabinet and demanded dissolution of parliament.

REBELS RESENT MOVE

May Result in Demonstrations, Belief

By United Press.

BUENOS AIRES, July 19.—Intervention of foreign powers in Brazil to protect the rights of their nationals was believed near today.

Italy and other European nations are expected to make an immediate gesture of protest against the inability of the government at Rio de Janeiro to give assurance that the rights of foreigners will be maintained.

U. S. Warship Requested

The request that a United States warship be sent to Santos to maintain rights of American citizens and to protect American property there, led to anticipation of similar action by other nations.

Sentiment among the rebels against the report of the Montagu Mission and against foreign financial intervention of any sort ran high at one time, and it is felt this might find expression in demonstrations against foreigners.

OKLAHOMA MINE ROW PETERS OUT

Danger of Further Outbreaks Believed Over

By United Press.

WILMINGTON, Okla., July 19.—Danger of further outbreaks by striking union miners to force suspension of work in non-union mines was apparently passed today, according to officials, when the summer's strife against the Hailey-Ola and Eastern Coal and Mining companies near here failed to materialize.

The Hailey-Ola mine, two miles east of this place, was operating normally while the Eastern company mine west of the town was closed down due to a shortage of fuel cars.

Work will be continued without curtailment, coal company officials said.

The Kala-Inola mine near Hartsburg, which was shut down forcibly yesterday when two hundred armed union miners forced a handful of non-union workmen to leave their post, remained closed today.

Guards were maintained by operators at all mines but further interference was not anticipated, according to the sheriff's office here. Several other mines in this vicinity are being cleaned out in readiness to resume production.

Two Houses and Store Damaged by Blaze

Fire partially destroyed two houses and a store building in the 1000 block on Line street avenue about 8 o'clock Friday afternoon but origin, owners, occupants, and amount of loss had not been determined by the fire department Saturday morning.

Fire Chief LaRose and Marshal Coe stated this morning a record of the fire had not been prepared but probably would be sometime Saturday.

$50 FINE ASSESSED MAN ON VAG CHARGE

A fine of $50 and costs was imposed Saturday morning in court by Judge R. A. Shivers against a man, which the court records show his name given as Henry Robichaux.

The man was charged with vagrancy and arrested Friday night in connection with a whisky raid by Chief Covington and men.

TRAPPING OUTLOOK THIS YEAR GOOD

Special to The News.

ORANGE, July 19.—O. E. Jones, local trapper, is preparing for the trapping season which opens in the fall by erecting camps to be used by crews who will trap this season.

Jones says he expects the trapping business to be better this year than in the history of this country.

Judge Would Make Marriage Difficult, Divorce Easy

SAID IT WOULD SOLVE PROBLEM

Atlanta Jurist Submits Cure For Divorce Evil

By JUDGE T. O. HATHCOCK
Judge of the Municipal Court of Atlanta

Written for The News
ATLANTA, Ga., July 19.—I think marriage throughout the United States should be made more difficult so that divorces can be easier obtained when they are necessary, and I do not think I am a bit radical about my viewpoint.

At present our divorce courts are crowded with hundreds of cases that are there because marriage was so easy, and afterwards finding themselves ill-mated it is difficult for unhappy men and women to get free of each other.

Divorce is a splendid thing when people find they cannot live together. It is my belief that a union should be dissolved if it is clearly demonstrated that the man and woman never were suited for each other. I do not mean that I favor promiscuous divorces, because I don't.

I believe that if the marriage laws were strengthened, and it were much harder to get married than it is today, the divorce courts would find time hanging on their hands with nothing to do.

Publication of marriage banns for at least 30 days prior to the marriage in newspapers and posting of the banns in the courthouses of the county, just like they do in Europe would be one means of safeguarding marriages. It would absolutely stop hasty marriages and elopements—the greater majority of which end in the divorce court.

Then there should be a penalty attached to false swearing as to age, physical condition, etc., in the application for marriage license, and the father, mother or legal guardian of both parties should be required to swear that the statements made in the application are true.

A certificate of sound health, specifying that there is no physical or mental reason why the party should not be married should be presented by both parties from a reputable physician who has made a thorough examination of both before the license should be granted.

Uniform marriage laws throughout the country, as well as uniform divorce laws, some day will be placed on the statute books, and when they are marriage will be much harder and divorce much easier.

Until that time, however, I think that the states themselves should look into the matter of ending so many hundreds of divorces each year. This can only be accomplished by making the marriage laws more stringent.

People who consider marriage some time before they actually take the step are pretty nearly certain to "stick it out," but those that "just get married" on the spur of the moment are keeping our divorce courts crowded, and it should be cleared up now.

In New York

NEW YORK, July 19.—There are many men in New York who bet on race horses every day—and never see a race.

They make their choice from charts and dope sheets. Many have been following the printed turf for years.

They save "charts and past performances" for many years, some of them having systematic filing cabinets for their records.

"Shorts" Murray, known to all Broadway bookmakers, broke tradition last week and left town to see the runners. When he returned he was carrying most of his clothes in his arms.

"Where's your trunk?" his friends questioned.

"I've got them with me," he answered.

"Why don't you pack your clothes in them?"

"No room," Murray explained. "I've got my records in them."

It developed that his two trunks were filled with records of races of many years, some of the records faded with age.

Murray has "outdoped" the bookmakers for three apartment houses, and a marble quarry.

He started with nothing, is now independently wealthy and lives in a Park avenue apartment.

The most consistent gamblers in New York are the stage hands—Broadway's theatre men who shift the scenes in Broadway's theatres.

Their day does not begin until 11:30 p. m., after the show.

Then they gather for their conventional recreation. They go to bed with the break of day and do not emerge until midday, when they go into darkened theatres to await the passing of the sun.

Bill Butler, one of the oldest scene-shifters, is an exception. He lives an hour from New York and is in his theatre each morning at 8. He remains at work until after the show, then travels an hour to bed.

In the winter Bill, his co-workers say, just goes home in time to fix the furnace, eat breakfast and start back to the theatre.

Butler is the matter carpenter for a chain of theatres operated by one producer.

"May Time" and "June Night," two new song hits, didn't hit until July. Proving that weather has nothing to do with success.

WHEELER WILL ACCEPT PLACE

Montana Solon To Be La Follette's Running Mate

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 19.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, democrat of Montana, has decided to accept the nomination for vice president on Robert M. La Follette's independent presidential ticket, according to information here direct from Wheeler.

Wheeler planned to make a statement about noon today announcing his acceptance and explaining his reasons for the decision to run with La Follette.

The national committee of the conference met at 9:30 o'clock in the Macintosh hall to perfect the independent organization and work out presidential campaign details of the campaign. Wheeler's letter on the vice presidential candidacy was sent to the committee.

The successful efforts of the progressives to elect Wheeler in their ranks comes at the end of several months' work. Three months ago the United Press announced exclusively that friends of Senator La Follette were urging the Montana senator to become the vice presidential candidate.

Wheeler turned down the offer at that time preferring to await the outcome of the democratic convention. He hoped that a "progressive" democratic would be named and that he could support the ticket.

Although Wheeler is confident that the La Follette ticket will carry Montana by a large majority he will urge the voters of his state to support Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, who is running for re-election. The personal friendship between Wheeler and Walsh dates back to the former's earliest political battles in Montana.

Wheeler has an energetic, whirlwind style of campaigning and it is expected that he will bear the brunt of the stamping of the independent ticket.

But 42 years old, Wheeler has had a meteoric rise in national prominence. Soon after congress met last December, Wheeler in a sensational speech in the senate made grave charges against former Attorney-General Daugherty. This led to the investigation of the department of justice which resulted in President Coolidge demanding Daugherty's resignation.

People should go slow with their marrying. It may be their last wedding for several years.

REV. BROWN TO START REVIVAL

Today's Service Last in Old Baptist Church

Rev. E. J. Brown, Southeast Texas Baptist association missionary, will conduct a series of revival services at the Central Baptist church, corner Sixth and San Augustine avenue, starting today.

The revival will be the last meeting to be held in the old building, Rev. T. E. Kennedy, pastor, announced today, and said that the windows of the building were being taken out so that the interior will be cool and comfortable.

At the close of the revival services will be conducted in the new building, Ninth and Dejean boulevard, work on which will begin Monday. The contract for the new building has been let, a formal dirt-breaking service has been held, and material is being assembled on the ground for work to begin Monday morning, Rev. Kennedy said.

Rev. Kennedy in speaking of the new building said that the beginning of a new building under the present pastorate has been delayed for several reasons, chief among which was for want of sufficient room on which to build an adequate meeting house for the future.

"Sufficient room, suitably located, has been secured and paid for," Rev. Kennedy said, "and it was deemed best just now to build only the first unit of a more pretentious building. During the former pastorate a subscription toward a new building was started and payments made thereon. But no plans were formally adopted. We are now receiving contributions for the new building and all who will contribute now will have the satisfaction of putting their money into a worthy enterprise."

SCOUT PIONEERS TO LAY CAMPS

Summer Outing to Begin July 27

Pioneer squad of Port Arthur Boy Scouts and officials leave next Thursday for the Scouts summer camp site on Beech Creek, and will have everything in readiness to receive the Scout troops when they go into camp July 27. It was announced today at Scout headquarters.

Transportation to camp from the Scouts will be arranged by Bert Hughes, it was decided at the meeting of the camping committee held Friday night in the Legion club house on Lake Shore drive. Various other details of the proposed annual summer camp for the Scouts also were taken up by the committee.

With underbrush around the camping site cleared away since last summer, the mess hall and kitchen enlarged, and numbers of other improvements made, the Scouts camp presents a different and far better appearance now, Scout officials said. The boys are lining up for the two weeks' outing, and while Scout officers are trying to get all camp applications in by July 23, provisions have been made to sign the boys up as late as the night before leaving for Beech Creek.

Members of the camping committee who were called to meet Friday night include Albert Perkins, chairman; Harry May, Bert Hughes and Guy Carroll.

ALEXANDRIA.—J. W. Land, merchant at Lamourie, La., is in a serious condition as a result of a severe beating inflicted by two high-waysmen who demanded money. While Land was fighting the two men, his wife fired at his assailants, driving them away.

BOUMA.—Motor bus passenger service between this place and Morgan City, connecting there with routes serving the Teche valley as far up as Lafayette, has started operations here. Four round trips daily are made over the route of 41 miles.

BOUMA.—Operations started in the new plant of the Montegut Packing company, 15 miles south of Houma, this week. This is one of three new canning plants erected in Terre Bonne parish. For the present the new plant is employing 30 people.

LAFALETTE.—Search for an automobile reported stolen from a front of a hotel here is being made. The car was the property of Fred Lafleur, a traveling salesman of Villa Platte.

MORGAN CITY.—A head-on collision between two automobiles on the Gibson-Houma road resulted in six young men receiving injuries, three of the victims suffering fractured legs in the crash. Among those hurt were Lagrange, Picou, Malanson and Dondal.

WINNFIELD.—Serious and probably fatal injuries were suffered by Little Murphy Eagle, 6-year-old son of James Eagle, farmer, when he fell about 12 or 15 feet out of a tree in his father's field.

LAFALETTE.—Harold Breanz, Arnaudville boy who has been visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Marchal Breanz, in this city, suffered severe bruises about the body when he was struck by an automobile on College Park avenue. The boy stopped directly in front of an approaching automobile as he hoped off a delivery truck he was riding, witnesses said.

NO NIGHT SERVICE AT CONGREGATIONAL
No evening service will be held at the Congregational church tomorrow evening, Rev. C. E. Weidner, pastor, said today.

At the morning service two special musical numbers will be given. Miss Margaret Kramer, who has been studying at Klamath's, studio in Washington, the past year, will sing a solo, "King of Love My Shepherd Is," and a mixed quartet comprised of Misses Kramer, Ethel Kline and Annie Ruth Blair, and Messrs. J. H. Baxter and A. M. Culpepper, will sing "Lead Kindly Light" with Miss Kramer as the soloist.

A. M. Culpepper is directing the Congregational choir, while Mrs. Fred B. Dwyer, choir director, is away on her vacation.

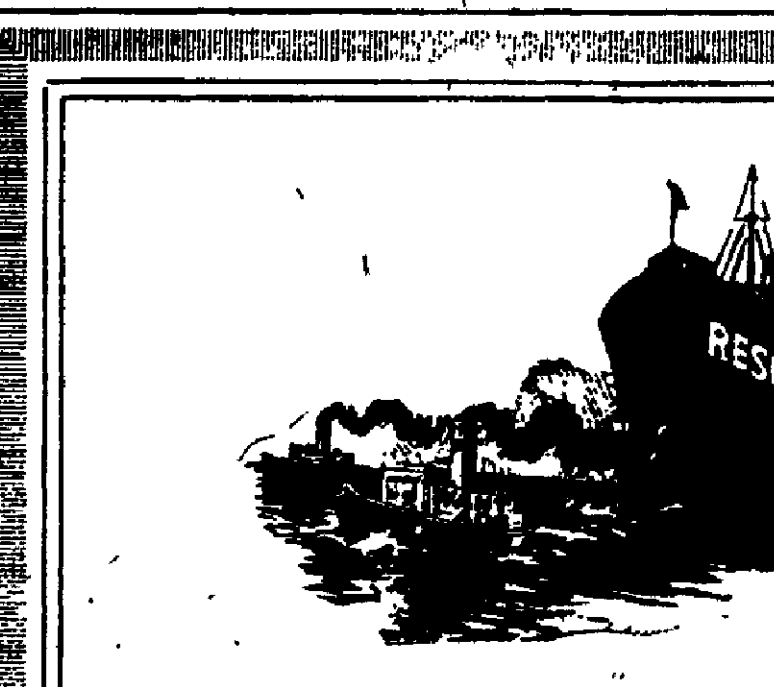

DR. ROBINSON, D. S., TO PREACH HERE SUNDAY
Dr. C. R. Robinson, district superintendent, will occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Sullivan and Lake Shore drive at both the morning and evening services tomorrow.

Dr. Robinson was former pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

MOSS MAY DECEIVE YOU IF YOU'RE LOST IN THE WOODS

Lost in the woods! Completely around! You know your map, or the picnic ground, or the woods, but you don't know where north is. Just what are you going to do?

Almost every boy and girl has heard that the one way to find north is to look for moss on the trunks of trees, because moss grows only on the north side. This, however, isn't entirely true.

Examine trees that stand more or less in the sunshine and others that grow in the dense shade of the woods and you will find a difference. Now remember that moss grows best in the shade and requires a good deal of moisture, and that the north side of a tree is always in the shade and holds moisture longest because the sun cannot get to it and dry it out. So moss on the north side gets what it wants —shade and moisture—and usually grows deeper there, even when it is found on the other sides as well.

This, however, does not apply to trees that grow so close together that their trunks get no sunshine at all. On these the moss will grow as readily on the south side as on the north, and when a tree leans so that the upper side catches and holds the most moisture, that side will gather the deepest moss, no matter what side it may be.
It is here you must use your common sense, in settling the question and choose only the trees that stand straight and have enough sunshine to dry all sides but the north. Even then one tree alone cannot always be trusted. You must examine a number of trees and choose your direction by the majority. Then, when you have decided which way to turn to go north, hold to that course,
don't be frightened, and forge
straight ahead, stopping very now and then to examine trees to be sure you are keeping to the course you started and are not circling.
"Where moss grows is north" is like many another so-called woodman's law, to be taken with a grain of salt, or, in other words, a little common sense.

HOW AN ENGINE STARTS CARS

Do you think that a railway engine just picks up a whole string of eighty cars, as they sometimes do,
and starts them all at once?
When you stop to think of it, that is a tremendous feat—to have power
to start eighty cars at once.
But the engine really picks the cars up one at a time. By the time it has started the last car they are all rolling, and their momentum keeps them going. Once they are under way the engine merely has to keep adding to their momentum, gaining speed.
This is done by means of the "slack." There is a little slack, or play, in the couplers between the cars and in the springs to which the couplers are attached. One car may be pulled ahead several inches without moving the next. This slack enables the engineer to start the first car alone, then the next, and so on.
In a freight train you can hear the slack stretched out—bang, bang,

bang—as the cars get the pull of the engine.
You'll notice sometimes that an engineer backs up a bit before he starts ahead out of the station. By backing up the engineer pushes the cars together and puts the necessary slack into his train. Usually, however, he puts in the slack as he stops. He can do this because he has two sets of air brakes—one on the engine alone, and another on the rest of the train. As he comes into the station he first stops the engine and then as the cars push into it he sets the brakes to hold the slack.
As you ride on trains, notice how different engineers handle the two sets of brakes. One engineer stops with a bang—he simply stops the engine and lets the cars run into
it. Another stops as smoothly as silk, first braking the cars to slow
them up fairly, then gradually braking on the engine to take up the slack gently.

Tragic for Him
The old gentleman met the ground with a thud. A small boy who was watching burst into tears.
"Don't cry, little man," said the old gentleman. "I'm not very much hurt."
"No," whimpered the youngster,
"but it was my banana you slipped on!"

Saved Him from Figuring Customer: "You don't seem so quick at figures, my boy." Newly: "No, boss. Most of the men say, 'Keep the change.'"

PLAY "TOTO" AT CAMP OR AT PARTIES

Toto is such a simple camping
game that you can almost guess how to play it from the picture, but you'll never know till you've tried it just how much fun it is. You can rig up the apparatus from things around camp. First make a baseboard three feet square, using ordinary inch boards or pieces of wooden planks. In its center nail three empty coffee cans, placing them so that the rim of each one touches the other, just as is shown above. Next make three yarn or string balls about the size of a tennis ball, and try to make a kind that can't bounce easily.
Place the board with three cans
on the floor, allowing it to lean against the wall or a chair with one side ten to twelve inches higher than the other. If you have some tools at camp you might nail two legs on one side of the board to raise it to the right height.
Line up the players eight or ten feet from the board. Then each one in turn tries to throw three balls into the can. The first to get all three balls in is winner. This is easy, but because the rims of the cans are touching, each ball has to be thrown squarely into its can or it will miss entirely.
Teams of two or four players may play each other, setting 100 for the winning score, or another way to play is to have one ball in a can out of 5, two balls out of three 15,
and three out of three to win the game.

Make a "Toto" set for your lawn or camp and have as much fun as the boys and girls in this picture are having.

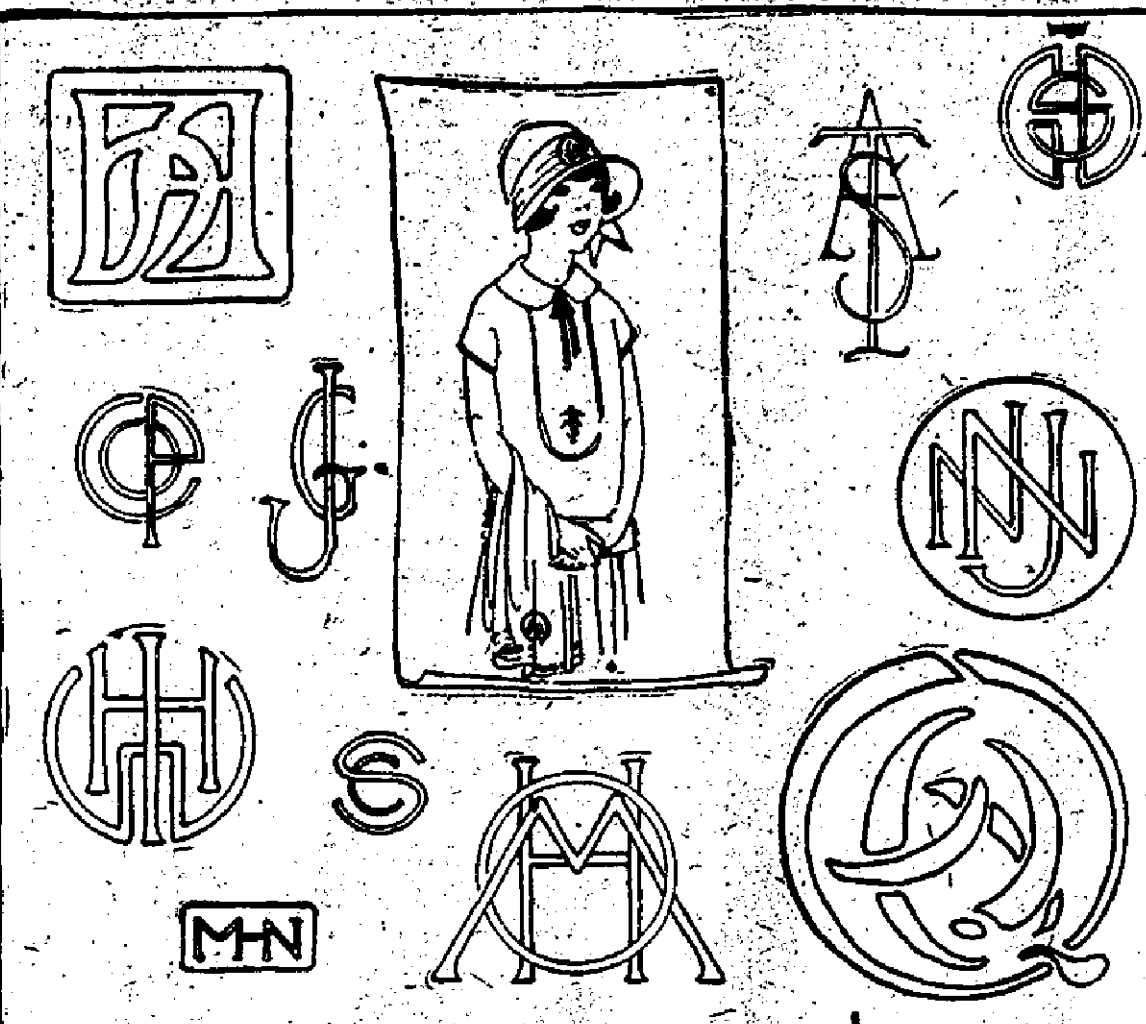

Too Much Effort
A small boy went to a village shop
and asked for a box of matches.
Presently he returned and said:
"Mother says these matches won't strike."
"Won't strike?" cried the shop-
man, irritably. "Why, look here,"
and he struck one on his trousers
to prove their quality.
The boy took the matches back,
but soon returned. "Mother says
he hasn't time to come and strike
a match on your trousers every time
he wants a light."

Pretty Well Filled
Teacher: "Every time you fail to recite I put a cross after your name."
Student: "My name must look like a graveyard."

Too Far
Taxi Driver: "Five dollars,
please."
Broke: "Back up to fifty cents.
It's all I've got."

MONOGRAMS FOR YOUR SUMMER DRESSES

A glance in the shop windows or through the season's fashion books brings our attention to a particular style which is proving very popular
—that of the embroidered motif applied on the left front of the blouse. Dozens of dresses for young girls show no other decoration except these motifs, which often take the form of the wearer's monogram.
Of course, it would be better to have no monogram at all than one poorly designed and embroidered.
But the girl who is skillful at fitting shapes together should find a great deal of pleasure in figuring out an arrangement of her initials. A girl has many opportunities to use such a monogram, so it is well to have one on hand. By transferring the letters to a linen- or poplin patch
she may embroider them for one of her dresses, though a better way would be to trace the letters on heavy paper and cut them out, then embroider over the paper on the linen and the letters would stand up well.

In making the monogram it is well to sketch hastily some six or eight arrangements of letters to find the most agreeable before working up any one. The letters need not be arranged to read in any particular form, or the largest need not be the one indicating the last name, but they should be planned merely to make a pleasing design. The whole secret of monogram making is for the letters to interlock or fit together. Letters with curving lines should be fitted into a circle. Others would fit more harmoniously into a triangle or oval. Elongate the letters or disperse them in any way to meet your demand on them.
In making a monogram patch for a dress it is often prettier to use a brighter color for the motif than the material of the goods. For instance, a tan linen dress could have a henna or Chinese blue patch with the letters in tan.

Besides the monograms on dresses
these decorations are used in many ways. The girl in the picture is wearing a motif on the front of a bright band around a felt hat.
The design is a popular Chinese one (shown in the lower right-hand corner), which you may trace out of the paper, and if your initials happen to correspond with any of those shown, you can set right to work
tracing them off for that gay patch
on your pocket.

A COMPANY DINNER MOVIE LESSON

Making salads is an art any girl can acquire. A delicious salad is just the touch needed for the company dinner which this series of "movie lessons" tells about. The dressing described here will do for many other salads besides the stuffed tomato one.

1. To make mayonnaise dressing, put 1 teaspoonful mustard, 2 tea-spoonfuls powdered
sugar, 1 teaspoonful salt
and the yolks of 2 eggs
in a bowl and mix
thoroughly.
2. Beat in 1 1/2 cups olive oil a few drops at a time. Add 2 tablespoonfuls vinegar and 2 tablespoonfuls lemon juice a few drops at a time.
When well beaten add 2
stiffly beaten egg whites
or 1/2 cup cream.
3. Peel 6 tomatoes and remove the insides. Place
the shells on ice to chill.
Add finely chopped celery
and cucumber to the pulp
and mix with mayonnaise.
4. Refill the shells; put mayonnaise on top. Serve on lettuce leaves and garnish with rings of red and green peppers. Set these away in a cool place
until ready to serve.

The next course for our company dinner will be the dessert, a lemon ice, which will be shown on the "movie lesson" film next week.

IN SNOOPYQUOP LAND WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUER

A little matter like a flight around the world is nothing in Snoopyquop Land. Take Major Headache, for instance, whose dome is a globe, whose body is a photograph, whose mind is a blank. The major is greatly annoyed by the round world flies—er, I mean flies. As he plays sweet music the notes fly up and buzz and circle around his head. As his head is set on an axis and he must run on a trolley around the universe, the only way to get rid of the pests is to put flypaper in his ears or catch the little beasts with his trusty net. "Good hunting," you wish him. "Catch as many flies as Ty Cobb does in a season." But he stubs his toe on a rock, falls down on the job and breaks his record.
The net, too, of all this is that the "round the world" flies escape capture, but go around the globe so many times that, like the goldfish, they die of distress.

A TWISTED TALK

Thomas was to make a speech before his English class. He had chosen as his topic "Kindness to Dogs," and expected to dwell particularly upon the cruelties which are sometimes practiced in the movies to make dogs do the stunts
and to perform so easily.
Thomas' teacher had impressed upon her pupils the importance of having a good opening sentence.
"I'll get something snappy that'll make 'em sit up and listen," decided the speaker in preparing his talk.
"I got it! I'll look 'em all in the eye and say, 'Every boy needs a dog.'"
The slogan seemed exactly the right thing. Tom practiced it till he thought he was perfect. On the morning that he was called upon,
however, he felt a tightness in the region of his collar as he started to speak. He tried not to appear nervous as he looked at his audience
and said, "Every dog needs a boy."
A murmur of pleasure went around the room. The students smiled in appreciation of the clever twist their class-mate had given the phrase. For a moment Tom didn't understand. Then it dawned on him what he had said. He coughed.
He stuttered. Then he decided to let it go. Might as well
He went on to develop his talk by telling how much better off some of the dogs of the show and circuses and movies would be if they had a kind boy for a master. When he was through the students clapped
for him.
"I shall grade Thomas very highly on this speech," said Miss Hastings, his teacher. "I was particularly struck with the opening sentence. If he had said, 'Every boy needs a dog,' that would merely have been the usual thing. It was the turn he gave it that made it effective."

GAMES OF ANIMALS

Did you ever watch bear cubs in a zoo putting on a boxing match?
They have great fun in these friendly bouts, following rules all their own.
Maybe it seems curious to you that young animals play games of their own and have just as much fun with them as boys and girls have with "hide and seek" or "run sheep, run."
Every species seems to have its own special type of play. Kittens, as you may have noticed, are fond of wrestling. Monkeys play "tag," and they seem to have a simple rule for their game which they all follow. Squirrels enjoy a game of "follow the leader," young goats run exciting races together; otters go sliding for the pure joy of the enstasy; even the clumsy fur seal of the far-away, foggy, Frigidus-Islands does a two-step on the beach.
Just as boys get a stamp-collecting habit for a hobby, so many birds have the collecting fan. Among these collectors are the jatkaw and the magpie. The bower-bird even builds a playhouse to play in!
There are two kinds of play in animals, one of movement only,
which trains the muscles and the nerves to the work of life, and the other the play of experiment, finding out what other things are. And just as human beings who never get too old to play are often the cleverest, so the higher type of animals are the playing ones.

FACTS THAT AREN'T

General Ulysses S. Grant, former President of the United States was not named Ulysses S. at all. His right name was Hiram Ulysses Grant. The U. S. part got tacked onto him when he entered West Point military academy.
Lead pencils aren't lead pencils at all. The part which writes is a mixture of graphite and clay, but the only lead in a lead pencil is the lead in the paint which is used to color the pencils.

Brass Is Not Mined

Many people think that the metal brass is mined somehow or another.
As a matter of fact, brass is not a separate metal in itself, but is an alloy, or mixture, of copper and zinc.
The bite of the black snake is regarded as a very poisonous experiment in the South. Actually, the bite of a black snake is not quite as harmful as a cat scratch, because the black snake has no poison sacks,
and he keeps his teeth a great deal
cleaner than a cat keeps her claws.

Golf Ball Not Acid

It is commonly supposed that the inside of a golf ball, down at the core, is filled with some sort of explosive acid. In reality, there is no golf ball on the market today which has an explosive acid, or any acid,
wrapped up in it.

The various mints in the United States all coin various metal coins,
but none of them make any paper
money, as is popularly supposed.
Every bit of paper money in the United States is made at Washington, D. C., in the Federal Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The paper which this money is printed on is a section of paper which, one has yet been able to imitate.

This paper is made in a well guarded secret mill in New England. No paper money in the world lasts so well or so long as that issued by the United States.

Irish Potatoes Not Irish
"Irish" potatoes were never thought of in Ireland until Sir Walter Raleigh took some back after his visit to America. Now they are one of the principal articles of food
in that country.

"Gold filled" is a piece of jewelry doesn't mean that the article is filled with gold or that it is solid gold.
What it does mean is that the article is plated extra heavily with gold.
However, "sterling" on silver always means that the metal is at least 925/1000 pure silver. The other things in sterling silver are used to harden and toughen up the more precious metal.

LONDON LOOKS TO MR. HUGHES

Hopes Secretary Can Unlock Reparations Tangle

LONDON, July 15.—Taking no part in the reparations conference but here at hand where Ambassador Kellogg and the American participants can consult him, Secretary of State Hughes was looked upon today by European statesmen as the possible dominating figure behind the scenes of this, the fifteenth international effort since Versailles to make Germany pay.

Secretary Hughes arrived in London to find the conference still deadlocked in committee stage—France and Britain disputing over the German's right to a free hand with Germany in case she is adjudged to have defaulted payments. The committee is that considering recommendations on this matter met today and reported progress, but efforts of Italian, Belgian and American members, failed to reconcile the British and French viewpoints.

In an interview, Hughes reiterated he would take no part in the international conference but said he was "making no attempt to conceal American interest in the experts plan."

Hughes arranged to meet Premier MacDonald of Britain and Premier Herriot of France personally, but informally, while here.

The presence of the head of the state department in London obviously will facilitate action by Ambassador Kellogg, Colonel James A. Logan, Jr., and the other Americans who are taking part in the conference.

They now will be able frequently to confer with Hughes, instead of being obliged, as previously, to consult the state department at Washington by cable.

There is no doubt about the importance of America's part in this conference. Allied statesmen made no attempt to conceal the fact that it is not only because they have been able to persuade the United States to join what they look for success. And even at that, the committee are finding rough going.

For which reasons—well informed observers attach importance to the presence in London of Secretary Hughes, even though he came "merely" with happy anticipation of meeting his colleagues of the bar association.

25 Proper Age for Women To Marry, Says Authority

Advocate Preparation, Is Best Guarantee of Success for One Entering the Vocation

BERKELEY, Cal., July 15.—Marriage is competitive. Adequate preparation, is best guarantee of success for one entering the vocation.

Miss Mary Messer, University of California instructor, is authority for the statement. She is the first to establish a college course in marriage and divorce.

"Marriage of a generation ago today are inadequate for successful wifehood," declares Miss Messer. "Times have changed, developed immeasurably, and a woman contemplating housewifery must prepare herself under conditions of the new era."

"The present is an age of competition, and of business partnership. Aspects of this have remodeled the marital state. Remorse is likely to be the lot of the girl who fails to adjust herself to advanced conditions."

Wash. Her Advice

A period intervening between finish of college and marriage should be utilized as a postgraduate course in experience, she believes.

"At least three years in the business world," she says. "This gives the girl ability to support herself, an opportunity to meet (and thus learn) men, and a general broadening which will reflect in her conversation and habits."

"During this period it is inadvisable for the girl to live at home. Also she should concentrate upon her work as though she intended never to quit self-support."

"It is necessary that the girl bring about this experience period as our laws do not protect against too early marriage. Some states allow immature girls of 14 and 15 to assume these mature obligations. Whether such marriages lead generally may be guessed."

Eighteen once was considered the ideal age. Maybe it was. But no more.

"Even 21, I should say, is premature, eliminating as it does the girl's opportunity for business experience."

"Twenty-five would seem a very good age, with 30 reaching a point where adaptation becomes increasingly difficult."

Three Periods

Experience with the opposite sex—but wholesome and decorous—leads toward fitting the girl for domesticity, Miss Messer declares.

For this she learns to estimate correctly the men who seek her hand in marriage, and to choose intelligently, and also gains better understanding for life with her future husband.

Lives of married women generally

MISS MARY MESSER.

fall into three distinct periods, explains Miss Messer, the first being prior to arrival of children, the second that when motherhood came and the last after the children are sufficiently grown to obviate necessity of diligent watchfulness, and the woman—hard worker for a number of years—finds herself with insufficient occupation.

"In this period the woman should return to outside vocation," Miss Messer believes. "Maybe she will find year in political, philanthropic or regular office work."

"But at no period should a woman be idle; her responsibility to contribute labor to the world is as great as that of men."

ECENTRIC ART PATRONESS DIES

Mrs. Jack Gardner, 85, Cut Wide Swath in '80's

By United Press

BOSTON, July 15.—Mrs. Jack Gardner, unconventional patroness of the Fine Arts whose name was a byword in Boston for more than half a century of eccentricities and extravagance, died last night in her Italian villa on the Fenway. She was 85 years old.

Internationally famous because her wealth enabled her to float conventions and secure her collections of paintings and sculpture were among the most celebrated in the world, Mrs. Gardner and her "Palace" were Boston institutions. Once a year she threw open her home to the public.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner was formerly Isabella Stewart, a New York heiress, reputedly a descendant of the Stewarts of Scotland. She cut a swathe in Boston society just before the Civil War. In 1880 she married John L. Gardner, son of one of Boston's richest merchants.

Elks Open Two-Game Series With Magnolia Team Today

LEACH OR COOK PITCHES TODAY

Both Games on Lakeshore
Called at 3:30

TWO of the strongest amateur baseball teams in Jefferson county open up a two-game series this afternoon when the Port Arthur Elks, managed by the ebullient thatch-topped Cliff Gunn, tangles up with the Magnolia team, more intelligently known as the Magnolia team of Beaumont. The second game will be played tomorrow afternoon, both games starting at 3:30 and to be played on Lake Shore diamond.

This morning Gunn was still puzzled as to who would start the game in the box for the Elks, but he figured he would start either Leach or Cook. Leach will be remembered as the brilliant moundman who turned in the last and deciding victory over Goose Creek in the fourth of July series. Cook pitched the first game, another victory for the Elks, against the visitors.

Only One Game Lost

The Elks do not propose to have their splendid record for the season tarnished in the games today and tomorrow. Only one game has been lost by the Elks, the being the second game with Goose Creek. The defeat made Manager Gunn put the ground all the more because it was on Lake Shore diamond, the home stamping grounds of the crew. The Magnolia boys have been playing a number of western Louisiana teams winning most of their games. In the double set to have the Magnolia will be considerably strengthened by the addition of players from the Orange team. Several Beaumont players, who are included in the Magnolia roster, have been going over to Orange on Sundays to play with the Orange nine. As Orange has no game slated for Sunday, this strength will be available for the Magnolia club, and afford plenty of material from which to choose for the Port Arthur games.

'RUBBER ARM' RUSSELL'S NAME

Relief Man Has Hardest
Job of All

By BILLY EVANS

"What is the toughest spot a major league pitcher faces during the season?"

Recently I asked that question of Walter Johnson of the Washington club, greatest pitcher of all time. During his long career as a big league star, Johnson has been up against every tough situation possible. Probably no one is more competent to answer the question I put to him.

"Nothing takes more out of a pitcher than acting as relief man," was his immediate reply.

Relief pitcher has hard job. "The relief pitcher must put all that he has on every ball pitched, travel at top speed."

"Ordinarily, I would rather pitch a close game than be forced to work at top speed as relief pitcher for a few innings in order to hold a scant lead."

This brings us to the hero of this story, Allen Russell of the Washington Nationals, champion relief pitcher of the universe.

"Rubber Arm."

Every ball player has a nickname. That's Russell's.

There's a reason, of course, for that unusual sobriquet. Russell's arm seems able to withstand any strain without breaking, hence the nickname "Rubber Arm."

Manager Harris of the Washington club says it is doubtful if he will start Russell in a single game this year. He figures old "Rubber Arm" is far more valuable as a relief pitcher, as one of his regulars' fathers.

With Red Sox Long Ago

Last season Russell took part in 52 ball games. He pitched only four full games. In other contests he did the hero stuff, and usually received no credit in the games won or lost.

His record for the season was 10 wins and 2 losses.

Russell had the unique experience of performing in 22 games last year before being credited with a victory. This despite the fact that he pitched superbly in most of the games in which he officiated. Usually his team was in the lead when he was sent in as relief man, thereby eliminating his chance to be credited with the victory unless the opposition tied the score while he was pitching.

About six years ago, Russell, while with the Boston Red Sox, suffered a paralytic stroke that for a time threatened to end his career. He was out an entire season, but came back with a vengeance.

A full game tends to tire Russell, but for five or six innings he is almost invincible. He is one of the few remaining spitball pitchers in the major.

12 Players to Make Journey to Sulphur Tomorrow Morning

Twelve Port Arthur Athletic club ball players leave tomorrow morning at 7:30 from the club headquarters for the trip to Sulphur, Miss. La. to play a return game. Last Sunday the locals were beaten 4-2 at Sulphur, but made such a good impression that the Louisianaans asked for another game.

Players to make the trip tomorrow morning are: Mooker, Jordan, King, Morgan, Hase, Perkins, Nell, Aldinger, Henry, Hall, Corley and Karsky.

MAY MACK FINISHING HER RECORD MILE

The world's record of 2:14 1/2 for 19-year-olds, held by Goldsmith Maid since 1878, was shattered recently by May Mack. The saddle race was entirely her grave, matronly dignity and whizzed around the course in the scandalous time of 2:13 3/4. "The old girl sure was feeding her oats," commented the surprised timers at the end of the race.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

So he didn't know what to do.

Happy Go Lucky Park was very popular with all the Green Wood folk. It got to be quite the style to save up pennies for a week and then take a day off and then spend it at the amusement park, where Nancy and Nick were working. And as for Misted Zip, the little fairman, who started it, why he was getting richer and richer every minute. And the richer he got, the nicer he made the park. He had put in a stand for ringing canes and a stand for shooting at a target that went ting-aling-aling when you hit the bull's eye, and a stand for taking chances. It's about the last stand that this story is about. But there I go! I guess I was meant for a Chinaman, for I'm always telling things backwards. To tell things forwards, it was this way: One morning Mister Bunney woke up and stretched and said, "Hum ho!" and wiggled his ears and hopped out of bed. Mrs. Bunney was up already and he could hear her rattling pots and pans in the kitchen as she got breakfast. "Ben will you see if the children are up?" she called. "We want to get an early start. They ought to be nearly dressed." "We're up—we're up, Mammy," they called. And soon all the Bunneys were around the breakfast table talking about the good time they were going to have at Happy Go Lucky Park and what they were going to do and everything. "I'm going to ride the giraffe on the merry-go-round," said Ben Bunney Jr. Mrs. Bunney was too busy getting the work done to say just what she was going to do, but Mister Bunney was planning and planning and planning. He wasn't so much planning as he was worrying. And this was what he was about: He didn't have very much money and he had two or three places to put what he did have. The very next day was Mrs. Bunney's birthday and he wanted to buy her a present. And if he went to the park and took the family he wouldn't have enough money to buy her anything unless he went to the savings bank and took out the rest of his money. And Mrs. Bunney wouldn't do that because his savings in the savings bank was for a rainy day and couldn't be touched. "My goodness, Pa," said Mrs. Bunney when they got to the park. "You look more as though you were going to a funeral than a picnic. What's the matter with you?" "Oh, I was just thinking," said Mister Bunney. "And that minute his eye fell on the stand where a sign said 'Take a chance for 10 cents and win a lamp.' Mr. Bunney then saw a row of lovely lamps of all colors under the sign and he had an idea. "I'll take a chance and maybe I'll win a lamp," he said to himself. "I will make a fine birthday present for Ma. I'll ask Nick about it." To Be Continued.

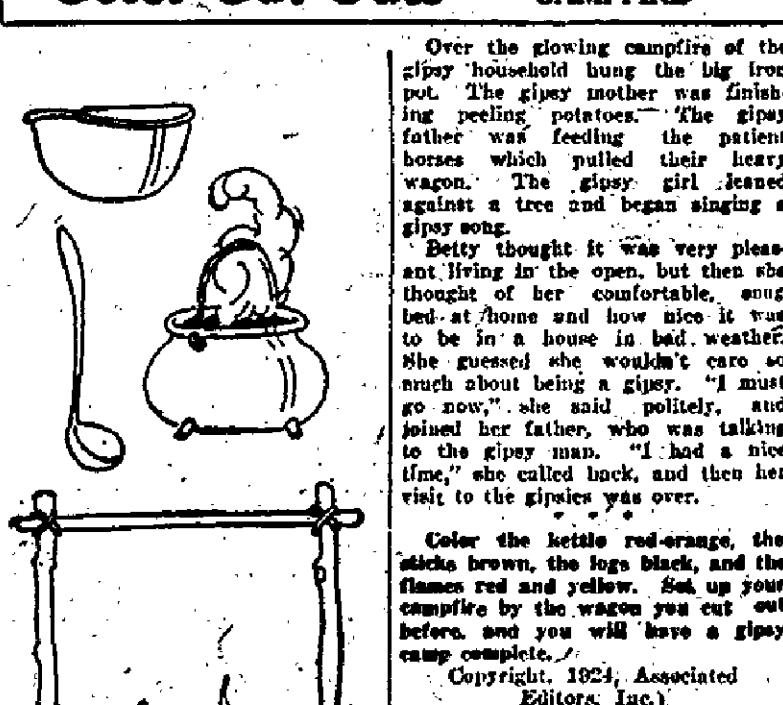

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE

By Uncle RAY

The Pope Quarrel With The Emperor. Pope Gregory the Seventh lived at the same time as William the Conqueror. William ruled over church affairs in England with a firm hand, but the pope did not interfere. The main Gregory wanted to keep out of church affairs was the German emperor. The emperor lacked courage. Fearing he would really lose his throne, he went one wintry day to the castle of the Countess Matilda at Canossa. The pope was there on a visit. Henry was not allowed to enter the castle. He had to stand outside in the courtyard, waiting for three days. It is said he stood barefooted in the snow. On the fourth day the pope let him into the castle. Henry's sins were forgiven, but they did not end the quarrel. The pope told him he would not let him get back on his throne until after another meeting. In the next story you will hear how the quarrel between pope and emperor was renewed.

Color Cut-Outs

A GIPSY CAMPFIRE

Over the glowing campfire of the gypsy household, the mother is finishing peeling potatoes. The gypsy father was feeding the patient horses which pulled their heavy wagon. The gypsy girl leaned against a tree and began singing a gypsy song. Betty thought it was very pleasant living in the open, but then she thought of her comfortable snug bed at home and how nice it was to be in a house's hot weather. She guessed she wouldn't care so much about being a gypsy. "I must go now," she said politely, and joined her father, who was talking to the gypsy man. "I had a nice time," she called back, and then her visit to the gypsies was over. Color the kettle red-orange, the sticks brown, the logs black, and the flames red and yellow. Set up your campfire by the wagon you cut out before, and you will have a gypsy camp complete. Copyright, 1924, Associated Editors, Inc.

HAIR OF SLEEPING WOMAN IS STOLEN

PARIS, Texas, July 10.—While Mrs. Tom Hearn, asleep at her home on North Twenty-third street Saturday night, some person or persons entered the room she occupied and cut off her hair, which was unusually heavy and luxuriant. Neither Mrs. Hearn nor her husband were awakened and the first knowledge she had of the act was when she awakened Sunday morning.

FALL FROM TRUCK KILLS DENTON MAN

DENTON, July 10.—J. A. Verrell, 56 years old, while riding asleep on a truck Sunday afternoon, fell from the machine to the pavement. His head struck the curb, inflicting a wound from which he died. He was a fruit dealer here and had been in business for three years. He is survived by his widow who is on a visit at Tyler, and four children.

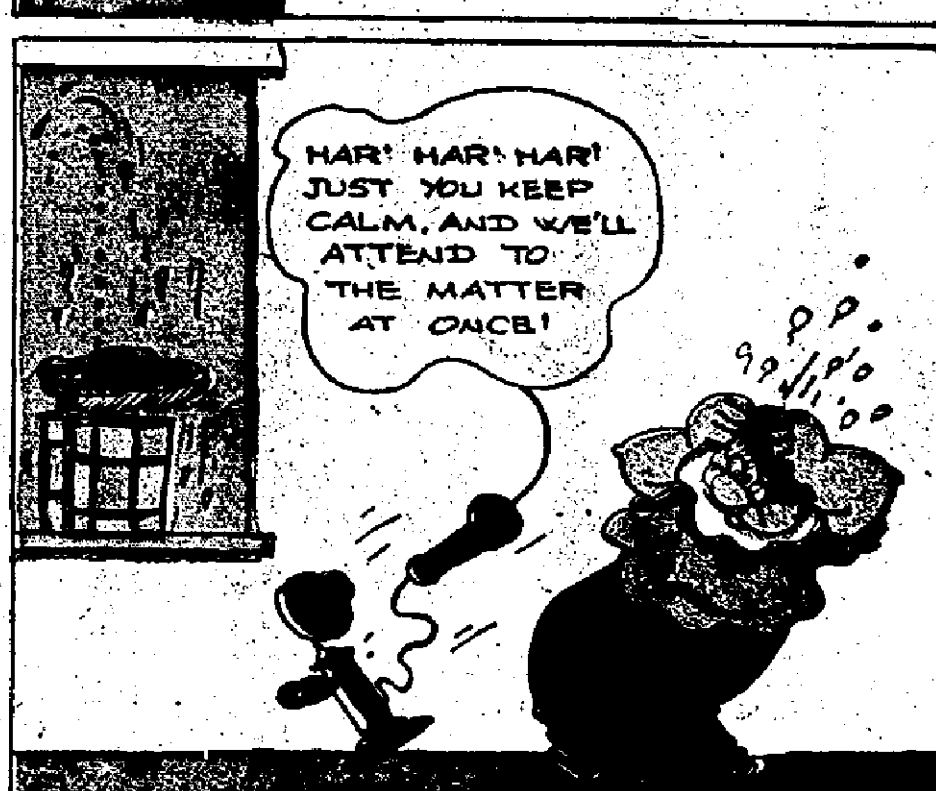

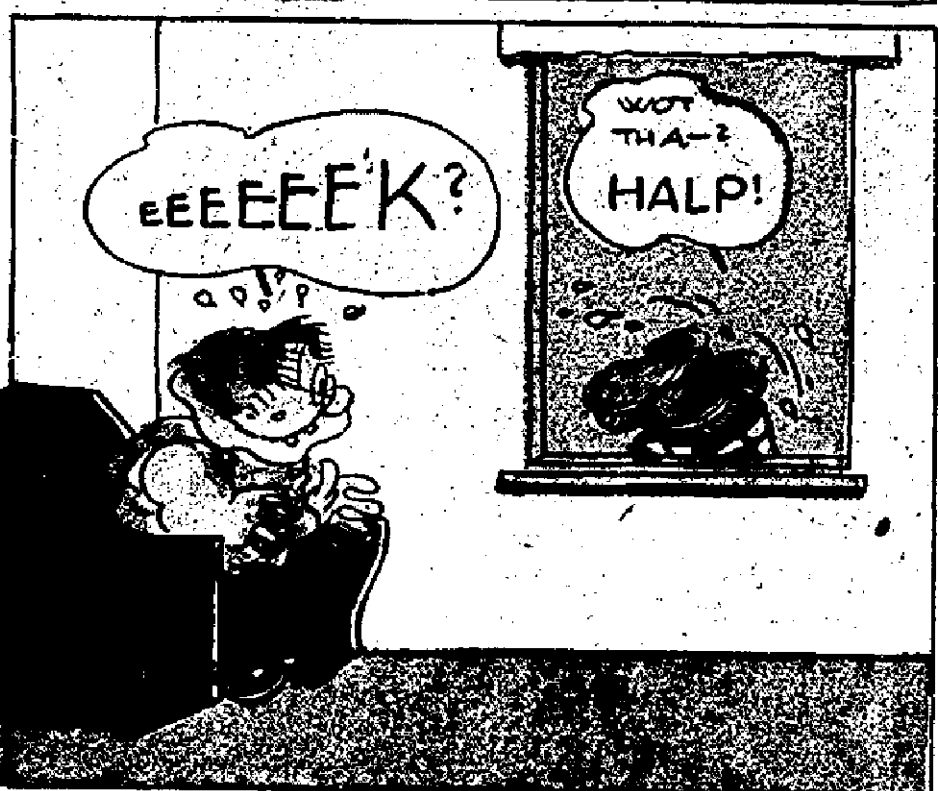

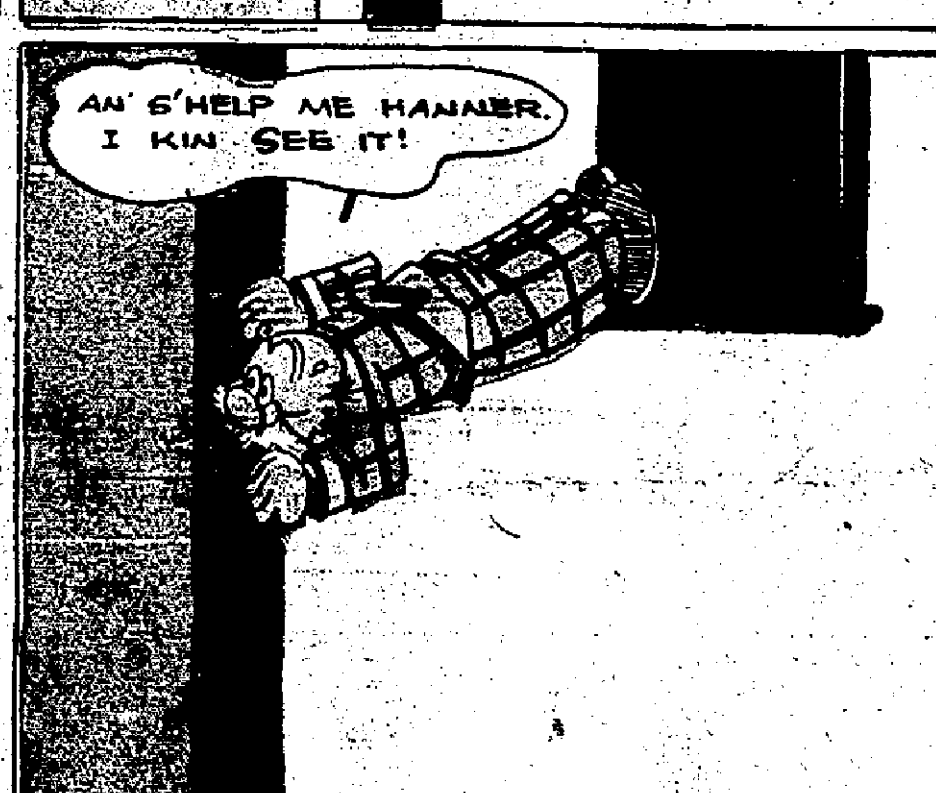

Mistaking the house next door for your own at night, is very bad for your reputation.

FORT WORTH GAS PAYMENT IS MADE

AUSTIN, Texas, July 10.—The state attorney general today received a check for $26,000 from the Fort Worth Gas company as part payment on the $34,000 due the state from that concern as gross receipts taxes. Accompanying the check was a letter declaring the balance would be paid when the books of the company are checked. When full settlement is made the suit will dissolve the suit now pending in the courts.
